News from the Near-by Towns

DOYLESTOWN.

The Doylestown and Willow Grove trolley road has at last found a purchaser, which, it is hoped, will end the litigation that has been a serious handicap to the road. The new owner of the property is C. Taylor Leland, of Quakertown, President of the Quakertown Traction Company, an energetic young railroad man, now engaged in constructing a trolley road from Quakertown to Doylestown. The purchase of the Doylestown and Willow Grove line by Mr. Leland was a great surprise here, for when the equity proceedings in progress before Judge Yerkes to determine the legality of the company's bonds closed last week there were two bidders before the court, John B. Stevenson, Jr., a large bondholder, and Henry G. Freeman, Jr., a Philadelphia capitalist who has been dealing in real estate in and about Doylestown. Mr. Leland's purchase was made very quietly. The road will be removed from the control of the court as soon as possible. There has been a great deal of complaint concerning the management of the property of late. In fact the business men of Philadelphia, who have summer homes along the line, became so indignant that sharp criticism of the bungling manner in which the road has been operated appeared in the Philadelphia papers. This censure was directed toward the Bucks County Trolley Company, which was an injustice, as the company has not had charge of the property for a long time. The present litigation concerning the road is for the purpose of determining whether the bonds of the company now in the possession of the receivers of the Guarantors' Finance Company, of Philadelphia, should remain in possession of that company or be returned to the trolley company. The Guarantors had possession of the bonds under a contract to furnish funds for the construction of the road, and it is claimed that this contract was not carried out, but that on the contrary the contractor of the road had paid some of its obligations and that therefore the bonds should be returned to the trolley company. Trouble of this character will probably end now that Mr. Leland has the property. He has purchased all the stock except that owned by William Jenks Fell, the promotor of the road. The final hearing in the bond matter was fixed for July 13.

Doylestown celebrated the Fourth in old-fashioned style. The fire company managed the biggest demonstration of the day, which consisted of a parade in which the company participated in addition to giving a fire drill. Company G, of the National Guards, the Quakertown band, and the Zook Fife and Drum Corps, of Norristown, were in line, and the balance of the procession was made up of floats advertising business establishments, with all sorts of queer devices intended to amuse the public, principally negro characters in odd carts and other vehicles. The parade was a very entertaining feature of the celebration. The shrill music of fife and drum, the martial strains of the band and the popping of hundreds of crackers and torpedoes made things lively in the old town, which was very gay with flags and bunting on stores and dwellings. It was a holiday enjoyed by everybody, and the fire company was congratulated upon the successful management of the affair. In addition to witnessing the public entertainment, which took place in the morning, many people left town in the afternoon upon picnic or fishing excursions, and in the evening several hundreds went to Willow Grove.

The closing scene in the legal career of William S. Wright, of Bristol, occurred here on Monday, when the County Commissioners passed a bill of $79.45 to defray the expenses incident to an investigation of the charges against Mr. Wright in order that the Bucks County Bar Association might determine whether the unfortunate young attorney should be expelled from the Association, Mr. Wright's name was stricken from the records by the court, and there the matter has ended.

Attractive Women.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Some are born with what is called "constitutional weakness." Those who do not enjoy perfect health, need only the proper precautions and the proper remedy to become well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine-organism.

TULLYTOWN.

Last Sunday evening at the Christian Church the members of the two local lodges, I. O. of R. M. and K. G. E., were addressed by the pastor, Rev William J. Wright, upon "The Power of Organization." In the introduction of his subject the pastor gave a brief history of the conception and growth of these two orders in the United States. Mr. Wright said that he believed in these and kindred organizations which exemplified the christian love taught in the New Testament. He said in conclusion "these organizations should be encouraged. Every man should belong to one or two fraternal organizations which are christian in principle and valuable aids to the church." There were about fifty members of the two orders present, and they with their friends made an audience that filled the church. Many favorable comments were heard as to the appropriateness and excellence of the pastor's address.

One of the features of the Independence Day celebration at the Penn Country Club was the presentation of a bicycle to Howard Shafer in consideration of the many favors done by him for the benefit of the club. No ingenuity of barbarism—no devilish invention of the masters of torture during the time of the Spanish inquisition ever devised an agony so intense, so persistent, so long enduring, so nerve-harrowing as that which is suffered day after day by the women whose distinctly feminine organism is deranged or diseased. There are three most trying times in every woman's life; 1st—when girlhood blossoms into womanhood; 2d—when motherhood is achieved; 3d—when the capacity for motherhood ceases (the change of life.)

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was devised to make these three periods safe and painless by restoring to vigorous health the organs involved. It soothes, heals, nourishes. It gives Nature just the help it needs. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

Me-too-medicines are preparations without standing or success. They are the substitutes sold as "just as good." Having no record of their own, when Dr. Pierce's cures are referred to they cry me-too, me-too, like the cuckoo in a Swiss clock. Don't accept me-too medicines for "Favorite Prescription."

Mrs. M. Barnes, of Balls Ferry, Shasta Co., Cal., writes: "My physician said I was suffering from the effects of 'change of life.' I had heart disease, and female trouble and rheumatism. My head was so dizzy I could hardly stand up. When I began Dr. Pierce's medicines I improved right along. I took seven or eight bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription,' a teaspoonful three times a day, and the 'Pleasant Pellets' at night. I feel as well as I ever did. I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's medicines to suffering women. I think that they are the best medicines in the world."

THURSDAY JULY 6, 1899.

Dame Fashion has created new disorders. "Pompadour headache" and "petticoat wrist" are the results of femininity being attired a la mode.

Inventions are making such rapid strides these days it is hoped that this country will, in the near future, be presented with a system of wireless politics.

The Central News declares that Perkasie is the weediest town along the North Penn Railroad, and suggests that the citizens form a brigade to destroy the rank growth.

Some homely truths are emitted in Kansas. An "editress" of the Sunflower State says: "The world is full of howling eight-hour men with patient fourteen-hour wives."

While in Washington Congressman Wanger stated that he believed that neither Colonel Hawkins nor Colonel Barnett would be the choice of the Republican State Convention. He said: "General Schall, of Norristown, will be nominated for State Treasurer. Compromises are being arranged which will bring about this result."

Trusts are gaining a substantial foothold in Mexico. The Cigarette Manufacturers' Trust has been formed and a $5,000,000 brewery combination is under way. Bryan's pet argument has been that the free and unlimited coinage of silver would put the trusts to sleep. Mexico is a citation which will prove disastrous to the soundness of the Boy Orator's reasoning.

A canvass has been made of the United States Senate by the New York Herald for the purpose of determining M. S. Quay's chances of being seated by that body. Thirty-three Senators are recorded as favoring Colonel Quay, thirty-one against him, fifteen doubtful, and seven not heard from. The chances are about even for the Pennsylvanian being seated upon the Governor's appointment.

It is unnecessary for a former Democratic incumbent to expatiate upon the circumstance that he was Bristol's postmaster de facto and that the efficient retiring assistant, Clarence Hutchins, was subordinate to his chief in the management of the office during the latter's short term dating from 1885. The conduct of the postal affairs at that time fully attests the truth of the assertion and the patrons of the office vividly remember the consequences, even at this late day.

The Jenkintown Times-Chronicle has an able Norristown correspondent, whose clean-cut statements carry conviction. In characterizing the recently-elected Republican delegates from Montgomery County, he says:

They are stalwarts, and believe that a majority in a political party, as in a State or and shall rule. There can be no half way business about it. Men who differ radically from the sentiments of a majority of their associates have the perfect right to retire and set up a party of their own—a sect separate, an organization of themselves, representing their peculiar views and anxious to promulgate them; but a Quaker has no place in a new school or old school, low church or high church, sacerdotal sect. The resolutions endorsed the President and our Governor and presented General John W. Schall for State Treasurer.

B. Frank Hobensack, of Ivyland, makes official announcement in today's GAZETTE that he is a candidate for the Republican shrievalty nomination. Mr. Hobensack's determination to formally launch his boom was only reached after a thorough canvas of the county. The encouragement received upon all sides was of sufficient proportions to cause him to believe that he is making no mistake in striving for the honor. Mr. Hobensack is one of the leading business men of Warminster township, and has a wide circle of acquaintances with whom he is very popular. He is an ardent party worker and in every way qualified to fill the position of sheriff. The fact that there is practically no opposition to his candidacy is abundant proof of the desire of the Republicans of this county to nominate and elect him to the office to which he aspires.

The Republican State Convention will make no mistake if it selects General Schall, of Norristown, as the party's candidate for State Treasurer. He represents a type of exalted manhood, is honored by his acquaintances and is a sturdy Republican. With his selection factional disturbances in Montgomery County would be greatly allayed. He is a stalwart who retains the confidence and esteem of the "antis." Editor Dambly, of the Skippack Transcript, who is president of the Anti-Quay League, after returning from the County Convention says:

The delegates were instructed for General John W. Schall, of Norristown, for State Treasurer, and there was not a "nay." General Schall was on duty in last year's war with Spain; he comes from an honored old Montgomery County family; he has worthily filled positions of trust in the past, and the endorsement is a compliment well bestowed May he be the next State Treasurer!

We are in receipt of a booklet entitled "Christian Science History," written by Septimus J. Hanna, and published by the Christian Science Publishing Society, of Boston. The purpose of the booklet is stated in the preface to present to all fair-minded people a few facts in contradiction to falsehoods as to the life and work of Rev. Mary Baker G Eddy, the author of the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," and the discoverer and founder of Christian Science.

The "History" condemns as falsehoods the assertions repeatedly made by "falsifiers" that Mrs. Eddy is dead and that her students are concealing the fact and falsely using her name; that she is a confirmed invalid, too feeble to perform any labor whatever; that she is confined in an asylum at Concord, New Hampshire.

We quote from the booklet as follows: "The fact that Mrs. Eddy, ever since she has resided in Concord—over ten years—has been seen by scores of Concord people taking her daily ride, in storm and sunshine, and is known by thousands to be one of the busiest and hardest-working persons in the world, is a significant refutation of the falsehood about the state of her health."

PINGREE AND ALGER.

Secretary of War Alger and Governor of Michigan Pingree are being freely interviewed these days. Alger refuses to be read out of the Cabinet by the newspapers and Pingree occupies the unique position of an administration antagonist and chief supporter of a member of the Cabinet for United States Senate. Under the circumstances the people are wondering just where Secretary Alger is at.

It is difficult to understand, under these circumstances, how Alger can insist upon retaining his place as a member of the President's official family. As is well known Pingree is a bitter opponent of McMillan, while the latter is a firm and loyal supporter of the administration and is a candidate for re-election. If Secretary Alger carries his insistance to remain in the Cabinet too far he should be requested to step down and out. He would do so without further delay if he were possessed of a proper sense of delicacy or a due appreciation of the eternal fitness of things.

So far as Alger is concerned the time has come when he must choose between Pingree and the administration. He has reached the parting of the ways. His resignation from the Cabinet ought to be a foregone conclusion. He cannot remain in the Cabinet and use the power and prestige of his office to defeat a loyal supporter of the administration and still have the President retain the confidence and esteem of the people. If Alger wishes to contest for the Senatorial election he should be forced to step down into the open field and conduct his fight in a manly fashion

As for Pingree, the pompous impudence of his declaration would be hard to parallel. "The murder and the destruction visited upon the innocent Filipinos" is as worthy of the Hoar-Atkinson-Bryan-Aguinaldo contingent as it is of the small-potato Governor of the Wolverine State. "The question whether I am for McKinley lies with the President, not with me," declares this shallow-pated egotist and detestable demagogue. Pingree evidently regards it as the duty of the President of the United States to come to him and implore his support, promising to be guided in conducting the affairs of the nation by the Pingree code of political morality and righteousness, which can be completely summarized in one word—Pingree.

The Governor of Michigan is for Pingree, "first, last and all the time," and he is "agin" such principles, measures and men as do not give promise of boosting the political aspirations of Pingree.

The present instance is not the first time that Potato Pingree has played the demagogue. In fact he has played the demagogue continuously since his entrance upon public life. He is a shrewd, scheming, wire-pulling politician, of the most dangerous type, who poses as a reformer merely because he thinks he can see in that role the surest and shortest cut to personal aggrandizement and power.

Secretary Alger, in deciding to cast his lot with Pingree, has written himself down a demagogue Politics makes strange bedfellows, as is well known. But the combination of Pingree & Alger is one of the strangest we have witnessed for some time. It will probably be—as it certainly ought to be—the political end of both Pingree and Alger.

Ex-Governor Hogg, of Texas, was the whole thing at the Tammany pow wow. His references to Bryan and silver brought forth free and unlimited howls from the tigers.

WHEN DEWEY COMES HOME.

Admiral Dewey is a little man, and although possessed of a wonderful constitution it is doubtful if it will stand the test to which enthusiastic Americans propose to submit it. It is said that one of the chief reasons why Admiral Dewey dreaded the return home was the thoughts of innumerable banquets, surging crowds and distasteful publicity. The Admiral is quiet in his tastes, retiring in his manner, and, paradoxical as it may seem, is a lover of a peace.

But the hero-worshipping Americans will not be restrained, and the victor of Manila has a hard campaign in prospect.

About the first mark of honor to be bestowed upon the returning sea fighter will be the presentation by Secretary Long of the beautiful sword voted him by Congress, on the east front of the Capitol at Washington, where the Presidents are inaugurated.

A leisurely pace will be set on the homeward journey and frequent stops will be made. England has promised to meet him in the Mediterranean with a powerful fleet and tender him a guard of honor while near British shores. His entrance into New York harbor will undoubtedly be a thrilling moment, and when he steams up the bay it is dollars to peanuts that his ears will be treated to more racket than was the case on the May morning when he changed the map of the world. It will be interesting to note whether the naval commander will remain as calm and self-possessed as when his ships were circling and hurling heavy shells at the enemy.

The estimate formed of him is that the plaudits of seventy million people will not disturb his mental equilibrium. There is little fear that he will be guilty of any after-dinner indiscretions, or will require a hat of unusual proportions. Noise will not rattle him or flattery seduce.

He will be welcomed as no man was ever welcomed on American shores. The bands will play and the cannons will roar, the bells will ring and the whistles will blow, and the whole population of the United States will resolve itself into a yelling chorus.

There is a time for enthusiasm as well as for anything else. Let the proud American bird scream; it will do us all good. The country has entered upon an exceedingly prosperous career. We are all happy and are in just the proper frame of mind to give George Dewey a reception that is a reception.

There is little danger of making a fool of the taciturn Admiral, so when he touches the shore let her rip!

To Sign Would be Criminal.

Jenkintown Times-Chronicle.

James B. Holland eloquently defended Governor Stone for his exercise of the veto power and for his courage in cutting down appropriations in obedience to the necessities and condition of the treasury—for it may be well said that a Governor who signs a draft on the public funds for money that is not there to meet the draft commits a crime like the business man who gives a check on a bank when his funds are exhausted.

INSURGENT BUREAU AT WORK.

GOVERNOR STONE AGAIN THE TARGET OF MALIGNANT CRITICS—MALICIOUS MISREPRESENTATIONS AND UNJUST CONDEMNATION.

(Special Correspondence.)

Harrisburg, July 4.—The literary bureau which the insurgent Republicans have maintained since they attempted to defeat Colonel Stone, the Republican nominee for governor last fall, has broken out again in a malignant attack upon the governor of Pennsylvania. This bureau is run upon strictly business principles. It is fostered and maintained by men who seek to obtain public honors and who hope to accomplish their ends through the defeat of the men who are today in control of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania. They attempted to name the Republican nominee for governor in the last campaign, and after an unsuccessful effort to prevent the nomination of Colonel Stone they joined forces with the Democrats and Prohibitionists to prevent the election of the choice of a large majority of the Republican party. Finding that they are wofully in the minority among the Republicans of the Keystone state, these insurgents, as they have since shown themselves to be, haove been carrying on a guerrilla warfare against stalwart Republicans in every section of the state. They have a newspaper bureau, which circulates their weekly budget of misrepresentations among the insurgent newspapers, and the Democratic organs are quick to take up the same matter as grist to the mill of the minority party. The vituperation and abuse which is heaped upon representative Republicans of the state comes mainly from this insurgent aggregation. The Democrats naturally desiring to miss no opportunity to divide the majority party, take up all the stories put afloat by the insurgents and use them to the advantage of the cause of Bryanism and everything else the Democracy of today represents.

STONE IS NOW THE TARGET.

During the session of the legislature Colonel Quay was the conspicuous mark of the Wanamaker subsidized organs. He was painted in the most hideous colors. He was maligned and misrepresented in a most outrageous manner. Colonel Quay has since been vindicated.

A jury of his peers, all American citizens and qualified electors of this commonwealth, have declared unanimously that the charges and insinuations affecting him were untrue, and no one familiar with the circumstances of the case can question the verdict.

Having vented their spleen upon Colonel Quay without effect, the same men are today seeking to discredit the Republican governor of Pennsylvania in the hope of disrupting the Republican party of the state, that they may be enabled to press their nefarious schemes to gain control of the party organization and be in a position to shower honors upon the men who place personal ambition above the success of the Republican party.

AS TO THE EXECUTIVE MANSION.

The insurgent newspaper organs throughout the state, which are not in a happy frame of mind by reason of the recent primary elections, that indicate the failure of the war against the stalwart wing of the Republican party, have recently been venting their spite in bitter criticism and misrepresentations of Governor Stone and his administration. They have even descended to censure the governor because the formal schedules for the information of bidders in the annual letting of contracts for state supplies, repairs and the like happened to contain a few paragraphs regarding some remodeling and furnishing of the executive mansion. Large headlines about reckless extravagance on the part of the governor and criticism of his conduct as an occupant of the executive mansion have excited the wonder and thoughtless comment of scores of people who never stopped to consider the facts of the case.

Governor Stone, who recognizes the condition of the finances of the state, should be generally commended for his action in this matter. Any one who has visted the executive mansion at Harrisburg will at once realize the necessity for many improvements. There are but four sleeping rooms in the entire building. Those who have had experience at the state capital will appreciate the fact that these accommodations are entirely too limited to meet the demands upon a governor of a state like Pennsylvania. Frequently the governors of other commonwealths call upon the chief executive of a state like ours to gain information as to the methods employed in the various departments. The president of the United States or members of his cabinet who might be visiting Pennsylvania would naturally call upon the chief executive. In fact, for them not to do so might be construed as a great discourtesy or at least a lack of official consideration. The governor must entertain such officials at his own expense, but the state at least should supply sleeping apartments.

There is a room on the upper floor of the executive mansion which, owing to the angles of the roof, is hardly fit to sleep in. It was purposed to raise a portion of the roof to make this room serviceable [illegible] sleeping apartment. A number of [illegible] changes were suggested by members of the board of public grounds and buildings, which is composed of practical men of affairs. Governor Stone, when he reviewed their recommendations, saw that many of them were proper and should, under ordinary conditions, be made at once.

GOVERNOR STONE SAYS "NO."

Recognizing, however, the condition of the finances of the state, he promptly declared that no money should be expended for such purposes until there shall be ample funds in the treasury to meet all pressing obligations.

In an official statement sent to the Associated Press after the circulation of reports charging Governor Stone with the responsibility for these several items of proposed expenditures, T. L Eyre, superintendent of public grounds and buildings, said: "The board had no intention at any time to make these expeditures. The governor opposed the outlay. These items were in the schedule of possible things required during the coming year, like many other items that get into the schedule under the law requiring every purchase to be from the lowest public bidder, but the items cannot be purchased except on requisition subsequently approved by the board. The articles appearing in the papers charging Governor Stone with needless and extravagant repairs to the mansion are absolutely false and without any justification."

Mr. John Whitely, 2000 Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., says; I have been taking Stretch's Balsam since 1890 for coughs and colds. I had an attack of la grippe in 1891 and have had others since. In the winter of 1896 and 1897, I had a spell of bronchitis lasting all winter, leaving a troublesome cough until I again tried Stretch's Balsam, which gave me prompt relief; have also used it for the children when suffering with coughs and colds with the utmost satisfaction. Fourth of July Races.

Not over two hundred people witnessed the races at the Bristol Driving Park on the Fourth. The events were a free for all, one-half mile race, a 2.35 class and an exhibition running race.

In the free for all Minster's Billy B, Downing's Florence Boy and Pitman's, of Trenton, Hattie C. started. The first two heats were won by Billy B. in 2 28½ and 2.29¼. Hattie C. then got three straight heats in 2.29, 2 30¾ and 2.30. Florence Boy did not start after the first heat.

In the half-mile event there were but two starters—George Horn's Martha Brown and Lady L. Cooper's Lady L. had no difficulty in winning the purse. Martha Brown cut herself through the boot in the second heat and left the track, Cooper driving over the course alone in the third. The time of the heats was 1.11, 1.12¼ and 1.11¾.

In the 2.35 class Minster's Lady V., Downing's Selem and Miles' Magnolia started. Lady V. captured three straight heats, Magnolia coming second under the wire three times and Selem bringing up the rear. Time, 2.32, 2.33¾ and 2 32¼.

Barclay Warburton's mare, Helen T., gave a splendid exhibition of her running qualities. A successful attempt was made to reduce her best half-mile record of 55 seconds. After galloping a mile the little rider started from the wire like a flash and made the half-mile lap in 53 seconds. The quarter was done in 26.

DEATH OF A. WEIR GILKESON.

Early last Friday morning A. Weir Gilkeson, Esq., passed away. His death was not unexpected as he had been a sufferer from a disease for several years that for the past few months had been making such marked inroads upon his constitution that his friends were reluctantly compelled to recognize the fact that his days on earth were numbered. Mr. Gilkeson for several years in his search for health visited different portions of the United States. After a trip to the Bermudas he travelled through the South, hoping that the balmy air of a warmer clime would restore him to health. Another year found him in the bracing atmosphere of Colorado trusting that there he would find relief. He was apparently considerably benefitted there and returned feeling better than he had for years. Since then he has remained at home and felt encouraged at times that he would eventually recover his health.

Mr. Gilkeson was born in Bristol October 29, 1853, and was the son of the late A. W. and of Margaret (Kinsey) Gilkeson. He was educated at an Episcopal Academy in Philadelphia and St. Stephen's College, Annandale, N Y. He studied law with his brother, Hon. B F. Gilkeson, and was admitted to the bar in 1879, and soon acquired an extensive and lucrative practice.

Mr. Gilkeson was a public spirited citizen. He took a keen interest in anything that he deemed was calculated to advance the welfare of the town. He was a member and officer of many organizations. He was secretary of the Bristol Improvement Company. He was prominent in building association matters, being the secretary of the Fidelity, the Bristol, and the Union. He belonged to the Building Association League of Pennsylvania and was one of the editors of The American Building Association News, published at Chicago He was secretary of the Bristol Electric Light & Power Co., and of the Artesian Ice Co., and was treasurer of the Bristol Library Association. He was also one of the promoters and until recently a director of the Bristol & Langhorne Trolley Company.

Mr. Gilkeson's kindness of heart can be fully attested by many people. Many homes in Bristol are owned by families today that bought and paid for them with almost no inconvenience through his advice and suggestions. He took an interest in the welfare of those who came to him and pointed out to them the proper methods to pursue. He helped people to help themselves thus being much more of a philanthrophist than those who indiscriminately bestow alms upon the improvident or unfortunate.

Mr. Gilkeson was one of the original members and the prime mover in establishing St. Paul's Episcopal Mission. He devoted to it much care and thought. Under the committee of management, of which he was the head, the mission grew in influence and purchased a valuable building site on Jefferson avenue upon which was erected the building where his funeral services were held.

He was a member of Bristol Lodge, No 25, F. and A. M., of Hermione Lodge, No. 109, K of P., and of Hermione Division, No. 10, Uniform Rank, K. of P., of which societies he was a prominent member.

In politics Mr. Gilkeson was a Republican. In the party machinery he did not take much interest but was fully in accord with the vital principles of Republicanism. He neither sought nor desired office and as a rule took no part in manipulating ward or township meetings or conventions to secure nominations for others.

Socially, Mr. Gilkeson was a charming companion. Well read, and thoroughly posted upon the topics of the day, any chosen theme would be discussed by him not only with ability and intelligence but with marked originality of thought and diction; and often, when the subject would admit of it, with a vein of humor and pleasantry that added to its attractiveness.

In 1882 he married Miss Mary E. Fairbairn, daughter of Rev. Dr. Fairbairn, then President of St. Stephen's College. The deceased is survived by his widow and one son, Fairbairn.

BAR ASSOCIATION TAKES ACTION.

On Friday evening the Bucks County Bar Association held a meeting in the Court House, at Doylestown, for the purpose of taking suitable action upon the death of Mr. Gilkeson. Judge Yerkes was elected chairman, and Henry O. Harris was appointed secretary.

Upon taking the chair Judge Yerkes made a brief address, in which he referred to the deceased as a man of the highest integrity, purity of purpose and unflinching courage; a man who was always found on the right side of questions, whether those which arose in court or those which affected public welfare. He had too much independence of character to ever permit himself to be engaged in the furtherance of any cause he did not believe to be right; and therefore, while he may have been mistaken in judgment, his integrity of purpose could not be questioned.

Some of his characteristics, said Judge Yerkes, were those of the highest type that adorn the profession and therefore should be taken cognizance of by the members of the Bar. If he believed the cause he advocated was right, or the cause of his client was right, he would stand up for that belief even though the whole world were against him. This is the characteristic of a great lawyer; this courage of conviction that has made great lawyers, and would have made him pre-eminent had he had the physical vigor of many men.

We have all recognized that he was a man of poor health, making a contest against the inroads of disease, which contest was characterized by the same courage as he showed in the practice of his profession, though it was evident that he did not enter into affairs as vigorously as he would had he been blessed with perfect health.

We lose, said the Judge in conclusion, not only a friend in Mr. Gilkeson's death, but a typical lawyer. His professional career was not only an example to the members of the Bar, but it was an evidence to the people, in the strict observance of the moral obligation of his profession, what a high purpose it is to follow the law. His death means the loss of one of the best, one of the noblest and one of the most useful members of the profession; one whose loss will be severely felt in the community in which he lived and by the Bar—a man whose death makes a vacancy in the Bar that will not be filled in a day and whose loss to his home town will be felt for years.

At the conclusion of Judge Yerkes' remarks a committee was appointed to draft appropriate resolutions. The chair appointed J. Freeman Hendricks, Robert M. Yardley, Paul H. Applebach, E. Wesley Keeler and Henry A. James, Esqs., as members of the Committee. They retired to the attorney's room, presently returned and submitted the following:

Whereas, The Bar of Bucks County have learned with deep regret of the death of A. Weir Gilkeson, Esq., one of its most honored members; and

Whereas, The profession of the law has lost a member who was conspicuous for his honesty and integrity, as well as for his learning and ability, courage and fidelity to his clients; a man who held many positions of trust and confidence among his fellowmen, and who filled them honorably; one who was conscientious and fearless in the discharge of his duties, and whose private life was that of a model citizen; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we tender to the family of the deceased our sincere and heartfelt sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the Court and spread upon its minutes.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously and the secretary was directed to forward a copy to the family of the deceased.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services were held in the chapel building of St. Paul's Mission, on Jefferson avenue, on Tuesday morning at 11.30 o'clock. The pall bearers conducted the body from the deceased's late residence to the mission, where the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, assumed charge. The Episcopal service was read by the chaplain of the Third Regiment, Rev. E A. Rook. A chorus of young ladies sang several appropriate hymns. The regiment of Uniformed Knights of Pythias, which was encamped at College Park, and of which Mr. Gilkeson was a staff major, attended the funeral in a body, accompanied by the White City Band, of Philadelphia.

The chapel building was crowded with the sorrowing friends of the deceased, who gathered to witness the sad rites performed preparatory to the laying away of the departed one. After the service the funeral cortege proceeded to the cemetery, headed by the band playing a dirge. At the grave the Rev. Rook read the ritualistic service.

The out-of-town members of the Bucks County Bar present were: Robert M. Yardley, Joseph W. Shelly, John C. Swartley, Henry A. James, Henry S. Murfit, J. Ferdinand Long and Thomas Ross, of Doylestown, and George A. Jenks, of Newtown.

The following ministers attended the funeral: Rev. Samuel Upjohn, D. D., rector of St Luke's Church, Germantown; Rev. George A. Kellar, rector St. David's Church, Radnor, Pa.; Rev. Frank B. Reazor, rector St. Mark's Church, Orange, N. J.; Rev. Gilbert R. Underhill, rector St. John's Church, Camden, N. J.; Rev. Charles E. Quinn, rector St. Clement's Church, Philadelphia; Rev. Francis Steinmetz, Ridley Park, Pa., Rev. James Blackwell, Mechanicsburg, Pa.; Rev. R. G. Hamilton, Palmyra, N. J.; Rev. A. L. Longley, St. Mary's Church, Burlington; Rev. W. B. Morrow, rector St. James' Church, Bristol, and Rev. E A. Rook, pastor Baptist Church, Bristol.

The pall bearers were: William C. Peirce, Francis Fenimore, Leopold Landreth, Frank F. Bell, Joseph R. Grundy, George A. Shoemaker, Charles E. Scott, H. B. Beatty, Benjamin J. Taylor and Jesse O. Thomas.

To Double Its Capacity.

The Bristol Rolling Mill is now in thorough running order. The eight inch mill used for the manufacture of the smaller sizes of merchant iron was started up yesterday morning. The mill now employs altogether about the same number of men as before the closing down seven years ago. Two new south furnaces are being erected which when completed will double the capacity of the mill, making it capable of producing forty tons of manufactured iron per day. These improvements will necessitate the employment of over twenty more men to handle the double quantity of scrap iron and to run the furnaces. The mill has ample roll capacity to use the additional amount of iron. The erection of the new furnaces puts the mill on an economical basis and will enable it to compete with larger mills for its share of business at any stage of the market. The influence of the operating of the mill has already been felt in the town. A number of families have moved here and a large number of men now have employment at home who were heretofore forced to leave the town to make their living. The other industries mostly employ women and children.

The Alumni Reception.

The reception given last Thursday night by the members of the Alumni Association of the High School to the graduates of the class of '99, the Directors, teachers and friends was a successful and pleasing affair. About eighty persons were present to enjoy the hospitality of the alumni. The assembly room was artistically decorated with flags and bunting, and potted plants were tastefully arranged about the room. An orchestra discoursed musical selections throughout the evening, and a liberal supply of refreshments was served. The committee deserves great credit for the excellent management of this very successful affair.

Robbers at Walnut Grove Farm.

Robbers broke into the farm house at Walnut Grove Farm on Monday evening. Every cupboard was thoroughly searched by the intruders, and table covers, lamps and silver knives and forks were piled in a heap on the floor ready to be removed. The barking of a dog aroused the gardener who occupies the rooms in the rear of the house, when the robbers took fright and escaped, leaving their booty behind them.

The same night an effort was made to gain an entrance into the residence of Henry L. Gaw. A large hole was cut in the front shutter, but becoming frightened the robbers departed without accomplishing their purpose.

Kissing Bug in Bristol

Miss Florence Wright, daughter of George Wright, left for Harrisburg on Monday for a visit to friends. Miss Wright was to have gone the previous Saturday, but on Friday she was suffering from the effects of a sting of a kissing bug. Her lips were so swollen and painful that her visit was delayed for several days.

Two Shot in the Eye.

On Monday evening Harry Hughes was shot in the eye by a young friend who held a revolver in his face and pulled the trigger. As usual the revolver was not supposed to have been loaded. The wadding from the cartridge and the concussion lacerated the eye ball and the powder was buried under the skin. Hughes was taken immediately to Dr. Abbott's, where the wound was dressed. It is not known yet whether he will lose his sight or not. The other case was that of Wesley Convery, living on Market street, who received a similar wound while playing with Melvin Jeffries on Fourth of July morning. Wesley had been stooping down and raised himself just as young Jeffries fired the pistol, and received the contents of the cartridge just below the eye. Dr. W. P. Weaver, who dressed the wound, says the boy is getting along nicely and that the accident was not serious.

YOUR CROSS.

Seek not to drop the cross you wear
Or lay it down, for if you do
Another shall be built for you
More difficult and hard to bear.

The cross is always made to fit
The back which bears it. Be content;
Accept the burden which was sent
And strive to make the best of it.

Think not how heavy is your load;
Think not how rough the road or long;
Look up and say, "Lord, I am strong,
And love makes beautiful the road."

Who toils in faith and knows not fear
Shall live to find his cross some day
Supported all along the way
By angels who are walking near.

JOHN THORNTON'S MISTAKE.

One morning Frank Gregg saddled up his horse and rode out across Possum ridge on his way to the little town of Scrongeout. Just after he had passed John Thornton's house, and while he was still on Thornton's farm, he met old man Barton.

Gregg and Barton were neighbors and friends, and, neither of them being in any hurry, they stopped for a little friendly chat. They spoke of the weather and the crops, exchanged a few items of local news and discussed the prices of farm products. Then, by and by, when these common subjects had been disposed of, Barton said:

"I don't know whether there is anything in it, Frank, but I hear it whispered about that you've got some notion of getting married."

Gregg chuckled softly, half closed his eyes and nodded his head with a knowing air.

"Well, if I did have a notion of that kind," he replied, "I reckon there wouldn't be nothin wrong about it."

"What mout her name be, Frank?"

"Brown. She is a widow."

Neither Gregg nor Barton was aware of the fact, but nevertheless just over the fence which ran by the side of the road there was a man crouched among some bushes listening intently to every word they uttered.

"Widow Brown?" Barton said questioningly to himself. "Widow Brown? Is she young and good looking?"

"She is young and good looking enough for me."

"Got any money or property?"

"Oh, $10,000 in cash and a small farm. She just received the money last week. Got it from her father's estate back east. But I'm not marrying her for that, understand."

"Of course not. But, still, the money will come in handy. Well, I must jog on. Got a little plowing to do this afternoon."

Barton started forward, but when he had gone a few steps he stopped again.

"Oh, say," he called back, "you'd better not let old Thornton know you're going to marry, for if you do he'll cut in and upset your plans."

"I guess there's no danger of that," Gregg replied, with a laugh. "No doubt he would if he could, but fortunately he can't."

"Maybe he can't, but I'm not sure of it. He's a long headed old cuss and a powerful schemer."

Gregg and Barton rode away, and no sooner were they out of sight than the man behind the fence arose to his feet and danced about with joy. It was John Thornton himself, and he would not have missed what he had heard for a good deal.

Thornton was Gregg's bitterest enemy, and a more vindictive and unrelenting enemy no man ever had. For years he had worked against Gregg and had been quick to embrace every opportunity to injure him and thwart him in his undertakings. Why he was so bitter against Gregg doesn't matter. It is sufficient to say that it was not Gregg's fault.

When Thornton learned from the conversation which had just passed that Gregg was going to marry, his first thought was how to prevent it, and he was not long in hitting on a plan.

Now, it so happened that Thornton was a widower and consequently in a shape to do a little something in the matrimonial way himself. He thought of this, and the plan upon which he hit was just to go to the Widow Brown ahead of Gregg and try to induce her to change her mind and marry him.

"I know the Widder Brown," he mused, "and if I ain't mighty mistaken she'll be willin enough to have me. She's shown a disposition to be sweet on me for some time but I ain't never encouraged her, because she wasn't just to my fancy. But I'll take her now in order to knock Gregg out, even if she is old and toothless and a vixen to boot. Then that $10,000—it wouldn't come in so bad, neither. I guess I'd married her long ago if I'd known she was going to have all that money coming her way."

He chuckled with a satisfied air and was immensely pleased with himself. He thanked his stars that he happened to be at work that morning in a part of the field so near where Gregg and Barton met, and it was lucky, he told himself, that he recognized the two men's voices and sneaked up to the fence to hear what they were saying.

He had thwarted Gregg more than once, but to beat him out of $10,000—that would be the cap sheaf of the stack.

Thornton went home, put on his best clothes and saddled his horse and rode away. Having decided on a plan, he proposed to act on it immediately. He rode direct to the domicile of the Widow Brown and there he stopped.

The widow was standing in the front door when he came up. He looked at her closely for a moment and involuntarily shuddered. He knew before she was distressingly homely, but that was the first time it had occurred to him that she was really hideous.

It would be a bitter pill, he acknowledged, to tie himself to such a creature as that for life, and for an instant he wavered. But he remembered Gregg and that $10,000, and he recovered his fortitude at once.

He dismounted and went in, and the widow received him graciously. He talked awhile on other subjects, then he shut his eyes and asked her to marry him. A little to his surprise, she consented readily. He had expected her to show a disposition to hold to Gregg, and he had calculated to have to use persuasion with her in order to win her over. However, he was very glad that she was so easily won, and straightway he proposed that they marry the next day. To this proposition she agreed without demur or hesitation.

He refrained from mentioning Gregg's name, and he was particularly careful not to let her know that he had any intimation of her rich inheritance. He wanted her to rest under the impression that he was marrying her solely for herself.

He went home in high spirits, and when he met Gregg on the road he felt so strongly inclined to crow over him that it was with difficulty that he restrained himself. As it was he tossed his head with a superior air and smiled knowingly, but even in that moment of exultation he found himself wishing that the widow was not quite so homely and sour as to be altogether repulsive.

The next day the wedding took place at the widow's house, and immediately afterward Thornton started back home with his wife. Gregg's house was two or three miles out of his way, but he was so anxious to let Gregg know how completely he had defeated him that he drove around that way. He was disappointed in finding Gregg not at home.

"Where is he?" he asked of Gregg's housekeeper.

"I don't know," she replied, "but I think he has gone somewhere to get married."

"Ah, who is he going to marry, I wonder?"

"I think it is Mrs. Brown."

Thornton chuckled. He had played it on his rival better than he had expected. He had snatched his bride and her fortune right out of his hands. Wouldn't Gregg feel cheap when he discovered how smoothly and completely he had been beaten? Thornton was so pleased that he was almost tempted to embrace and kiss his new wife in spite of all her homeliness. As he drove off he called back to Gregg's housekeeper:

"I have just been and got married myself, and I wish you would tell Gregg about it when he comes home. Tell him I'd be pleased to have him call over and visit us and bring his wife—when he gets one."

Two days passed. Thornton saw nor heard nothing of Gregg. He was only slightly surprised at this. Gregg was at home, no doubt, sulking over his defeat. It occurred to Thornton that he could make his rival's defeat more bitter by tantalizing him a little.

Accordingly he hitched up his horses and took his wife out for a ride. He drove straight to Gregg's house. He would parade his wife and his happiness right before Gregg's eyes.

Sure enough, when he drove up, there was Gregg sitting on his front porch. He was alone and, Thornton imagined, disconsolate. Thornton chuckled, and his face beamed with joy. He had made his rival feel the sting of defeat, and now he would press the sting in deeper. He stopped at the gate and spoke. Gregg nodded to him in return.

"Come out and let me introduce you to my wife," Thornton called.

Gregg arose slowly, after a little hesitation, and came down the walk. He was not pleased at receiving a visit from Thornton, and his face and movements showed it. Thornton saw Gregg's hesitation and ascribed it to the wrong cause. He concluded that it was all owing to his defeat.

"It's a great thing to have a good wife," Thornton went on, "and I don't see how a man lives without one."

"Yes, it's a great thing," Gregg assented. "No doubt of that."

"Then why don't you get yourself one?" Thornton asked, breaking into a loud, coarse laugh. "I did hear the other day that you were thinking of marrying right soon."

"Did you?"

"Yes. In fact, I was told that you had gone away to get married."

"Well, that was true."

"Was, eh? Why didn't you marry, then? Had your woman gone back on you or had some other man cut you out?"

"Neither. I did marry. Here comes my wife now. Mary, let me make you acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Thornton."

Mrs. Gregg came forward and smilingly acknowledged the introduction. She was quite young and very pretty, and her manners were charming. Thornton thought her one of the handsomest women he had ever seen.

"By the way," Gregg continued, "it is rather a peculiar coincidence that Thornton and I should marry the same day and both of us marry women of the same name."

"Eh! How is that?" Thornton cried.

"Why, you married a Mrs. Brown, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, my wife was a Mrs. Brown."

Thornton turned pale and then red, and he trembled all over. He saw in a moment that a great mistake had been made and that he was the victim. But he could blame nobody but himself. He had married the wrong Mrs. Brown: that was all. His cunning had overreached itself for once.

He sprang into his buggy and drove furiously away without another word. He did not speak to his wife all the way home. He felt bitter toward her and wished with all his heart that she was on the other side of the earth.

"I have acted the fool worse than Thompson's colt," he thought. "I have tied myself for life to this old vixen, and I didn't interfere with Gregg at all. I'm an old idiot."—Buffalo News.

WAITING FOR THE DAWN.

How Four Poker Hands Were Held All Night in the Dark.

A soldier tells this poker story, which incidentally accentuates the distrust with which poker players regard one another "when friendship ceases" and the faith a man has in the hand he holds:

One night after taps four men gathered in a tent to do away with their pay. It was the night of pay day, and there was no convenient place in which to spend their money except over cards.

The game had gone on with varying fortune here and there. It was after midnight. The sentry was a chum and had been told not to see the light in the tent. At last a jackpot was on the board and had been "sweetened" until it was very tempting. Every one was in it, and it was worth before the open about $20. When one of the players opened it, every one staid and drew cards.

The edge had a full house, the next man four tens, the third man four queens and the dealer four aces. The opener threw a dollar into the pot. The next man raised, and it was raised and reraised until it was beautiful to see.

At this point there was a scurry of footsteps outside. The sentry rushed in, grasped the lantern and dashed it out, jerking and extinguishing it as he did so. As he disappeared he whispered hoarsely:

"Officer!"

Instinctively four hands went out in the darkness and spread themselves over the pot, while four other hands closely clutched five cards each.

"Hold on, fellows," whispered the dealer. "Every one take his hand off the table and keep it off until the light comes back. We'll just sit here and nurse our cards. My hand's good enough to wait for."

"So's mine," said the others.

Then they waited. Slowly the night passed, growing chillier and more chill in its going. The sentry was cursed, the officer was cursed, but still they sat. At last the first glimpse of gray appeared in the sky, and as soon as it grew light enough the four played their hands and tumbled in for a few minutes' sleep before the bugle called them out again.—Kansas City Star.

A Farm For a Bowl of Punch.

A deed is on record in Goochland county, Va., an abstract of which reads: "William Randolph, for and in consideration of Henry Wetherburn's biggest bowl of arrack punch, to him delivered at and before the sealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof the said William Randolph doth hereby acknowledge, hath granted, &c., unto the said Peter Jefferson and to his heirs and assigns one certain tract or parcel of land, 200 acres, on the north side of the Northanna, in the parish of St. James, in Goochland, 18th May, 1736." This was Captain Peter Jefferson, father of the president, by his marriage Oct. 3, 1739, with Jane Randolph, first cousin of the William Randolph of Tuckahoe, above mentioned. —Chicago Record.

A Wise Girl.

"Girls have to be as wise as serpents nowadays or they'll get left. Do you remember Lulu Thompson?"

"Yes."

"You know she studied in the school of nurses?"

"Yes."

"Well, she knew her business."

"Is she still nursing?"

"Not much. She married the first rich patient that came to the hospital."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When He Ought to Think.

There are only two occasions when a man ought to think a lot more than he talks—when he goes fishing and when he doesn't go fishing.—New York Press.

Not Raised In Florida.

Among the interior decorations of a restaurant not many squares from city hall are a number of artificial palms. The palms are as natural in appearance as if they had been grown instead of manufactured and probably not one person in a dozen among the restaurant's patrons is aware of their artificial character.

An afternoon or two ago an elderly couple, evidently from the rural districts, came into the restaurant and took a seat. They gave their order and then began to look around.

"That's a handsome palm, Henry!" exclaimed the woman, pointing to the largest specimen. "I wonder if it grew that big in here?"

"Of course it didn't," replied the man, with a look of superior wisdom. "It was raised down in Florida. That's where they all grow, and then they are shipped up here."

Just then one of the restaurant's attaches approached the palm with a damp cloth in his hand. Taking hold of one of the leaves he yanked it from the stem and began to rub it vigorously with the cloth. When he had cleaned the leaf to his satisfaction, he replaced it and pulled another. By this time "Henry's" face was a study, as was also that of his companion.

"I guess that plant didn't grow in Floridy, after all," the woman managed to whisper. "What do you guess, Henry?"

And "Henry" allowed that he guessed the same thing.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CELERY KING
NATURE'S CURE

A Young Girl's Experience.

My daughter's nerves were terribly out of order. She was thin and weak; the least noise startled her, and she was wakeful at night. Before she had taken one package of Celery King the change in her was so great that she could hardly be taken for the same girl. She is rapidly growing well and strong, her complexion is perfect, and she sleeps well every night.—Mrs. Lucy McNutt, Brush Valley, Pa.
